Even though life is far from perfect, handsome young Treston Fair Leigh believes in heroes and fairytales. His favorite song is You Are My Sunshine and he's certain love can conquer all.

But when the man he's supposed to marry does something so unthinkable to him he's not sure he'll ever recover, he stops looking for love altogether...until he meets the one man in the world he believes is intrinsically decent enough to save him from all the bad boys he's ever known.

While he's planning to marry his hero, he quits his job as stripper and part time escort and rearranges his life. The only problem is the most notorious billionaire bad boy in Vegas has fallen in love with him, through no fault of his own. And no matter how hard Treston tries to fend off his advances and insult him the bad boy won't give up.

Only this time Treston is serious and he's going for the good guy instead of the bad. He doesn't care about money or looks or fame. But will the billionaire bad boy leave him alone? And is the man Treston's going to marry truly ready to forget about Treston's past, the unusual way he shoots ping pong balls out of his body, and all the men he's been with?
