Redeeming Eve is both a biblical theology and a practical reflection on implementing the Bible's theological vision as to women in church and society. It is a theological argument, rooted in scripture, but it is also the story of a Church implementing the liberation of women for the purposes of God. The book calls for the liberation of women to do whatever they are gifted and called by the Spirit to do in the church and the world. Its purpose is to call churches to not only embrace, but to embody the Spirit's liberation of women to their callings. The book is written for the average believer. It is not a scholarly tract. It is a compressed, readable, and succinct statement, targeting the Bible believing evangelical churches who respect the authority of scripture. The argument targets both sexes and all adults within the churches.
