War is brewing in Arctara, and Eirian Cadoc, a mere singer by trade who has never even lifted a sword before, has been unwillingly drafted into it. At the training camp for new recruits, he meets Lieutenant Ithel, a handsome but cold and merciless man who spares no one his quick wrath. With the help of his friends, Eirian does his best to adjust to life in the army and stay out of range of the lieutenant's vitriol—but when Lieutenant Ithel decides to take Eirian on as his own private student, the young soldier is sure that disaster's afoot.

But there's more than meets the eye with the lieutenant, and beneath his stoic exterior lies a man damaged by his past, a man that Eirian wants to help. Both desperate for a life beyond war, they find themselves falling deeper into the comfort they bring to each other. Together, Eirian and Lieutenant Ithel struggle to make sense of life, friendship, loss, love and hope in the midst of war, all while fending off the inevitable grasp of Death.

The Last Command is a complete and standalone gay romance novel, depicting the love story of two men in an epic fantasy war setting. It is intended for mature audiences, as it contains lengthy explicit sex scenes (first time, frottage, oral sex, anal sex), adult language, and mild violence due to the war setting. Please note that this is the remastered edition of a previously published book.
