What happens when a grandmother can write and a 7-year-old can draw? You get "Don't You Roll Your Eyes at Me!" a delightfully amusing collaboration in which a little girl tries bossing around some animals, and they just roll their eyes and ignore her (kind of like some kids we know). In the end, of course, Grammy tries bossing around Devon, the bossy little girl, and she ends up - you guessed it! - rolling her eyes at Grammy. Written by Beth Quinn, a former newspaper columnist and current book editor, and illustrated by her 7-year-old granddaughter Devon, this is a book that will produce eye-rolling and laughter across generations in every family. A perfect read for every grandmother and her grandchildren.
