"Teaching British values to children" is a resource to support teachers and early years professionals in implementing the teaching of the 'British values and principles' into the foundation stage and primary school curriculum. It gives examples of the type of Q&A's that can be used to introduce the four values with ideas for games, activities and so much more to make teaching this subject interesting and fun. Interestingly, the strategies used to promote this subject work well in supporting children's attention, listening, speech and language development. Furthermore it gives helpful examples of how the 'British Values' are already embedded into the foundation stage and primary school curriculum while describing how you can merge the 'values and principles' into any topic and or lesson. The Ethos of the book is full of positivity, promoting equality for 'ALL' children.
