Two Sweet Clean Historical Western Romances that you'll be sure to enjoy.

Thomas Baldwin never wanted to remarry after his wife died, but because of meddling townsfolk, he finds himself with a strange beautiful woman at his doorstep.

Thomas Baldwin, a farmer in the Colorado Territory finds himself a widower and the father to a crippled toddler. He can't possibly get all of his farm work done and raise his son at the same time. Thomas is terrified of betraying the memories of his dead wife. In the end, with the non-stop pestering of an old store lady, he agrees to hire a nanny. But, truth be told, he is uncertain about having another woman in the house.

Ruby McAlister answers Thomas's letter calling for a mail order bride. She has had her own shares of ups and downs. She is looking for a fresh start, but her past might not make it that easy. Will she tell Thomas her darkest secrets or will she keep them hidden until they are exposed?

Neither Thomas nor Ruby have any interest in falling in love. However, fate has other plans for the two of them. Will the truth bring them together forever, or will it rip them apart?

Dahlia Lamb is to be the wife of a mysterious man she has never met, but when her mystery man suddenly has a change of heart, she finds herself desperate and far from home

Dahlia would do anything to take care of the family she loved so dearly, even if it meant leaving them behind to become a wife to a man she'd never met.

Walker wasn't looking for love, he was trying to mend the parts of himself he had lost so suddenly. But when Walker met Dahlia his past wouldn't allow him to move on.

Without another option Dahlia found herself in the arms of the town's respected doctor, but not all things are as simple as they may seem.

Would Dahlia end up trapped in a situation she could no longer control, or would Walker be able to confront the demons that kept them apart?

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These are stand-alone stories with an HEA, so no cliff-hangers!
